

ICC United Kingdom

A year in review 2022

Chairman's foreword

Paul Dreschler CBE • Chairman

2022 was another challenging year for the global economy. Brexit, post-pandemic recovery, the energy and cost crisis and continue to impact UK trade and investment performance and disrupt global supply chains. The need to re-make the case for international trade as a driver of economic growth and prosperity is as important as ever, arguably more so, with international trade largely missing from the current growth narrative.

ICC's efforts in Ukraine, specifically the organisation's role in actively helping to facilitate a solution to the Black Sea humanitarian corridor, exemplifies the reach and influence of the institution. As we saw during Covid, ICC is where international institutions turn for a pragmatic voice of business in a global crisis. ICC's presence at the UN climate and biodiversity conferences was also impressive, with large business delegations at both forums actively brokering practical solutions in both international frameworks. No other business organisation matches ICC's international scale and representation as an independent convener and broker of policy solutions, creator of industry frameworks and arbiter of disputes.

Closer to home, I am delighted to see ICC United Kingdom continue to play a leading role nationally and internationally in developing a cheaper, faster and simpler trading system. Red tape and unnecessary bureaucracy are consistently highlighted as barriers to trade in business surveys. With legal barriers to the digitalisation of commercial trade documents in English law scheduled to be removed in June 2023, we have a unique opportunity to remove barriers and transform and modernise the whole international trade system. It is an opportunity we must not pass up. One hundred years ago, ICC played a central role in creating the rules and frameworks we still use for trade today. Now is the time to establish a modern trading system that is fit for purpose for the next 100 years.

I want to take this opportunity to thank our members and sponsors for their continued support and expertise, without which ICC would not be able to have the impact it does. On behalf of the Board I would also like to thank the team for their dedication and hard work in delivering another successful year despite challenging conditions.

International Trade provides a strong foundation for relationships between nations and blocs. If we are trading and if we are talking we can continue to be merchants of peace.

I am delighted to see ICC United Kingdom continue to play a leading role nationally and internationally in developing a cheaper, faster and simpler trading system.

ICC provides a unique proposition for business

Chris Southworth • Secretary General

As an international institution, ICC provides an impartial convening forum in which to work with the international business community to shape frameworks, implement practical solutions and promote international best practice. All the big-ticket challenges we face today require international collaboration, whether the climate crisis, reversing biodiversity loss or modernising the trade system.

ICC's Carbon Market Principles, Sustainable Trade Finance Framework and Standards Toolkit for Paperless Cross Border Trade are all groundbreaking examples of shaping the global marketplace and standardising how we do business. Our leadership at the ICC Digital Standards Initiative, the launch of the UK Centre for Digital Trade and Innovation, the 'Shutting Fraudsters out of Trade' report and becoming one of only three accredited organisations to UN Cybercrime Convention negotiations are similar examples of where we are filling coordination gaps in the market, driving reform and delivering innovative policy solutions that help remove barriers for UK businesses.

We continue to maintain a regular presence in the media as a pragmatic voice for international business on the issues that matter, making the case for trade and standing up for ICC's mission priorities on open, cross-border trade.

We also continue to help ensure UK business is visible and present at global forums, coordinating two large UK delegations to COP27 in Sharm el Shiekh and COP15 in Montreal—the latter in partnership with the UK Business and Biodiversity Forum. Our events are some of the largest in the ICC network, reaching an audience of 5,000 people across 100 countries to promote international best practice.

2022 was a challenging year for recruitment, inevitably disrupting our capacity in some areas. Despite that, the team yet again demonstrated their ingenuity and teamwork to punch above their weight regarding influence and impact on the agenda. Moving forward, we aim to consolidate some of our achievements over the last few years and deepen our work with members to ensure we continue to build and innovate as an organisation, working with the rest of the ICC network and our partners and alliances in the UK.

All the big-ticket challenges we face today require international collaboration, whether the climate crisis, reversing biodiversity loss or modernising the trade system.

2022 highlights — UK

International reach and influence

3,000 experts across 100 countries accessed events with 55 top-tier media hits across the international media reaching audiences of 400 million people across 200 countries and territories.

Making trade cheaper, faster and simpler

The UK Centre for Digital Trade and Innovation (C4DTI) was launched as an ICC United Kingdom-led global initiative based in the Tees Valley providing a public, private partnership mechanism to accelerate the digitalisation of UK trade.

Reducing risks in the digital economy

ICC United Kingdom became one of three organisations accredited to UN Cybercrime Convention negotiations providing unique access for international companies to shape the outcome of an international agreement that will influence how companies are regulated in the digital economy.

Shaping a sustainable economy

ICC led large UK delegations to COP15 and COP27 providing a mechanism for UK companies to directly influence the direction of travel towards tackling climate change and reversing biodiversity loss.

Shutting fraudsters out of trade

ICC published a groundbreaking report on fraud in trade from which has been launched a programme to address a coordination failure in the market and reduce duplicate financing.

Centre for Digital Trade and Innovation

The Centre for Digital Trade and Innovation (C4DTI) was launched on 8 April 2022 with the mission to make UK trade “cheaper, faster, simpler, more secure and sustainable”.

C4DTI is global initiative based at Teesside University established with support from the Tees Valley Combined Authority. It is industry-led and government-supported, working with the ICC Digital Standards Initiative, governments, business groups, companies and international partners.

C4DTI’s vision is a modern, digital trading system that is cheaper, faster and simpler for all companies. An environment where paper is no longer used, where risk is reduced, finance is cheaper and more accessible, borders are frictionless, systems and processes connect, and information flows in common, standardised formats across jurisdictions and supply chains.

Such an environment will improve the existing trade processes but will provide the means by which the transparent, accountable, and sustainable supply chains we need now, meeting the requirements of both commerce and governments as they face current global challenges.

C4DTI’s mission is to provide an impartial framework that brings industry and government together to accelerate the adoption of digital processes based on three types of interoperability; legislation and policy, international standards and technology. As a public/private partnership our framework enables the legislative, policy, standards and rules elements of trade to proceed at the same pace.

To make UK trade cheaper, faster, simpler, more secure and sustainable.
